Environmental Monitoring and Governance Division: a brief overview

The overall aim for the Environmental Monitoring and Governance (EMG) Programme is to ensure that country members “will have the capacity to develop and implement transparent and robust frameworks and processes for improved environmental governance, planning, monitoring and reporting”. This means giving due attention to the need to systematise capacity development for planning and implementing environmental policies and legislation in a more integrated, inclusive and coherent way. It emphasises effective strategies for mainstreaming environmental considerations into local, national and regional development planning processes, such as regular environmental monitoring, data collection and analysis and periodic integrated state of the environment reporting at the national and regional levels. It also requires appreciation and support for involvement of all stakeholders of environmental governance, from individual initiatives, to the roles of government institutions, civil society organisations and the wider community. The EMG Programme provides the glue to ensure integrated and balanced delivery of SPREP services for individual Members in the strategic priorities of climate change, biodiversity and ecosystems, and waste management and pollution control.

Governance is the principal concept underlying the EMG Programme and for the purposes of the Programme, is defined as "the exercise of authority at all levels - through institutional structures, decision-making processes, policies and rules - for the purpose of attaining environmentally sustainable development."

ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENT AND PLANNING OFFICER BACKGROUND
One of SPREP’s core roles is to coordinate and support environmental assessment and planning in Pacific island countries and territories (PICTs), in collaboration with members, partners and donors. SPREP’s role started in the 1980s with general environment country reports and evolved to more comprehensive National Environmental Management Strategies (NEMS) in the 1990s, and to the establishment of Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA), and more recently, Strategic Environmental Assessment (SEA), often linked to National Sustainable Development Plans.

Various forms of environmental monitoring and reporting have also been implemented in the region, including national and regional State of the Environment (SOE) reporting and reporting on achievements under key Multilateral Environment Agreements (MEAs). These activities have guided and assisted SPREP Members in their progress towards sustainable and resilient development.

The Environmental Assessment and Planning Officer is a key position within the Environmental Monitoring and Governance Division, that provides technical support, training and capacity building for the application of environmental assessment and planning approaches such as EIAs and SEAs which support sustainable development.
